

Time to say goodbye, Asslar: PVA TePla moves to Wettenberg

(Asslar, November 28, 2008) - As of December 1, 2008, PVA TePla AG will be relocating and thereby finally leaving its old site in Asslar, which has been the Company's home since it was founded in 1991. Following the relocation of the production of high tech systems to the new site in Wettenberg near Giessen over the course of this year, the administrative departments of the listed company will move at the start of next week.

Employees now find state-of-the-art, modern production and administrative buildings waiting for them, reflecting the growth and success of the Company. Around 250 PVA TePla employees will continue their careers on usable space of over 15,000 m². The functionality and aesthetics of the new administrative building shared equal priority in planning. The design focused on a clear structure of all functional areas, a light and intricate construction and airy and friendly workspaces thanks to large window areas. The proximity to the Justus Liebig University and the Giessen-Friedberg University of Applied Sciences with their varied engineering and natural science disciplines also offers excellent opportunities for joint research projects.
